Junko Tanaka is a Japanese high school student. She's visiting a city in California on a homestay program. Mark Johnson is Junko's host father who has come to pick her up at the language school where she's studying.

M: Hi! Are you Ms. Junko Tanaka ?

J: Yes. You must be Mr. Johnson.

M: Yes. I'm sorry I'm late. The traffic was bad. You know, on a rainy day like today, people drive more slowly than usual. Anyway, are you ready to go?

J: Yes.

M: OK. Here, let me help you with your suitcase. Is this all you have?

J: Yes. Everything is packed in that.

M: You're a smart traveler. You travel light. My car is right outside, so you won't get wet.

J: Great. ...Oh, this is a Japanese car, isn't it?

M: Yeah. I've been driving Japanese cars nearly 15 years. My wife drives an American car, though.

J: Why do you like Japanese cars so much ?

M: First, they're reliable. For example, I've had no trouble with this car for five years since I bought it, and that's really amazing. Second, they're economical. They don't use a lot of gas.

J: I'm very glad to hear that. Japanese cars do have good reputations, don't they?

M: Yeah. You should be proud of Japanese technology.

J: I'd like to get a driver's license when I become 18.

M: In many states here, you can get a driver's license at 16.

J: Really? I'm 17. I'm old enough here then.

M: That's right. Oh, I almost forgot. I need to do some shopping. First, we'll stop by an ice cream shop. What's your favorite flavor, Junko?

J: Definitely vanilla. If I could have two flavors, chocolate would be my second choice.

M: All right, Junko. You know what you'll be having for dessert this evening.
