Yosuke: Hi, Kyoko. Can I ask you a personal question?

Kyoko: Sure, go ahead, Yosuke.

Yosuke: What blood type are you?

Kyoko: I'm blood Type-A.

Yosuke: OK. Would you say we can use blood types to predict people's personalities?

Kyoko: That's an interesting question. I think we can.

Yosuke: May I know why you think so?

Kyoko: Well, all of my friends seem to fit standard blood type-personality categories.

Yosuke: For example?

Kyoko: Well, Type-O people are known to be confident and Type-B people tend to go their own way.

Yosuke: Oh, I see! That makes sense.

Kyoko: What about you? Do you think we can tell people's personalities based on their blood type?

Yosuke: Well, I don't think we can. First of all, the blood type-personality categories are really vague. It is very easy to make someone fit almost any category. Many friends of mine, for example, actually have a mix of a few different categories.

Kyoko: Thanks for explaining. By the way, I forgot to ask you earlier. What is YOUR blood type?

Yosuke: Actually, I have what is called 'Golden' Blood Type. It's the world rarest blood type. Only around 40 people are reported to have it. And there are only nine donors worldwide. And, obviously, no blood-personality link has been established for this group of people!

Kyoko: Wow, you're truly special! I have a good idea. Let's go!

Yosuke: Where are we going?

Kyoko: To a hospital!

Yosuke: Why?

Kyoko: You should start donating your precious golden blood! You can save people!
